My students are a talkative bunch of nine and ten year olds! They love talking about their experiences and I often call them story tellers. Many of them have such a love for animals, nature, arts, the sciences, and math. Coming from a low-income school, many of them have limited resources available to them, especially technology.

I am currently teaching 5th grade in an intermediate school that houses students in 4th and 5th grade with a very diverse population. Some children in my class are reading significantly below grade level. Catching these students up to their peers is a challenging task and having books that interest the below level readers is exactly what is
